

An update on our program offerings

Together during this unpredictable time

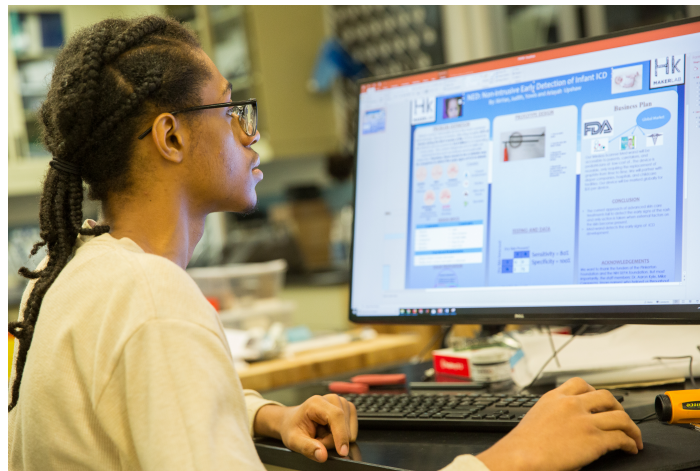

Like most of the city, we're having to adjust to the current state of the world. Providing the opportunity for NYC students to help solve the most pressing health problems the world is facing is more important than ever!

The end of April brought the start of our 3rd year of Bioforce. Although we couldn't meet our students in person, we got to virtually meet some of our next generation of scientists. They brought their enthusiasm and passion for science without leaving their homes!

Although the program format has changed, what hasn't changed is our dedication to teaching our students what it means to think like a scientist, and what to expect from a career in research!

Hk Maker Lab will run virtually this summer from July 20th to August 20th. The virtual Maker Lab will utilize our experience in supporting NYCDOE high schools right now as teachers have adapted their engineering design curricula to a virtual environment. Students will work in teams to create solutions to biomedical problems. The program will also be a co-learning professional development opportunity for middle and high school teachers.

We are working on adjusting our middle school engineering design program so that it's available virtually. It would take place in July and August, 2-4 hours per day for 3 to 4 weeks. Please respond to this email if your family would be interested in this program or if you have other ideas on programming that would better serve your needs this summer.

Consider Giving

We know that the switch to remote learning is leaving some children behind. Budgets for NYCDOE schools are being slashed. The work we do in schools and outside-of-the-school-day is and will be more important than ever.
